

Aikininjutsu yellow belt curriculum

The Aiki Ninjutsu yellow belt curriculum (often 8th Kyu or 5th Kyu, depending on the organization) covers foundational skills in stances, strikes, kicks, breakfalls, basic self-defense, and introductory weapons techniques. While specific requirements can vary by school, the following elements are commonly included in reputable Aiki Ninjutsu programs:

1. Etiquette and Basics

- Dojo etiquette and basic terminology
- Proper bowing and respect

2. Kamae (Stances)

- Shizen tai no kamae (natural stance)
- Jumonji no kamae (cross stance)
- Other basic stances as required by the school^{[1][2]}

3. Ukemi (Breakfalls and Rolls)

- Zenpo kaiten (forward roll)
- Koho kaiten (backward roll)
- Zenpo ukemi (forward breakfall)
- Ushiro ukemi (backward breakfall)[1][3]

4. Daken (Striking Techniques)

- Elbow strikes (hiji, enpi)
- Ura shuto (reverse knife hand)
- Omote shuto (outer knife hand)
- Tsuki (punches: jab, cross, back punch)^{[1][2]}

5. Geri (Kicking Techniques)

Mae geri (front kick)

- Sokugyaku geri (heel kick)
- Kinteki sokushi geri (groin kick)[1][2]

6. Kansetsu-waza (Joint Locks)

Basic joint locks appropriate for beginners^[1]

7. Sabaki (Movement and Evasion)

Basic footwork and body movement for evasion^[1]

8. Nage-waza (Throws)

Introductory throws as specified by the instructor^{[1][3]}

9. Weapons Basics

- Hanbo (short stick): right and left diagonal strikes, two-handed strikes
- Introductory knife (tanto) and chain (kusari) handling, if included in the curriculum^[1]

10. Randori (Free Practice)

All rank exams typically include some form of controlled sparring or application^[1]

11. Additional Requirements

- Fitness: Participation in a set number of training sessions or exercises (e.g., 50 himum in AKBAN)[1]
- Knowledge of basic Japanese terminology and techniques^{[1][4]}

Schools may supplement or modify this list, so it is important to consult your specific instructor or organization for precise requirements. The above outline reflects a synthesis of established Aiki Ninjutsu and related ninjutsu programs^{[1][5][4]}.
